DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

2. Claim 61 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Hess (2002/0023376).

Hess discloses a flame simulating assembly comprising at least one light source 14; a first screen 18 with a front surface (facing left in Fig. 3), the first screen being positioned in a first path of light from the at least one light source, the first screen being adapted to receive light from the at least one light source to form at least one image of flames transmittable through the front surface of the first screen; a second screen 38 with a front surface (facing right in Fig. 3), the second screen being positioned in a second path of light from the at least one light source, the second screen being adapted to receive light from the at least one light source to form at least one image of flames transmittable through the second screen; and the first and second screens being disposed relative to each other such that the front surfaces thereof face in substantially opposite directions.

3. Claim 61 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Schroeter et al.
(2004/0060213).

Schroeter discloses a flame simulating assembly comprising at least one light source 10; a first screen 12 with a front surface (facing right in Fig. 2), the first screen being positioned in a first path of light from the at least one light source, the first screen being adapted to receive light from the at least one light source to form at least one image of flames transmittable through the front surface of the first screen; a second screen 13 with a front surface (facing left in Fig. 2), the second screen being positioned in a second path of light from the at least one light source, the second screen being adapted to receive light from the at least one light source to form at least one image of flames transmittable through the second screen; and the first and second screens being disposed relative to each other such that the front surfaces thereof face in substantially opposite directions.
